

TOWN PESTS

The Tramp is a Pest that blooms in the Backyard only in the Summer. When he Shows Up at the kitchen door, summon Faithful Hector, inventor of the Bum's Rush, and have him Usher the Tramp into the Alley. If We gotta Work for our Eats, why should Tramps coast through the World on their Nerve?

WITH THE TRAVELING MEN

In the "Sample Case" department of the Sunday Lexington Herald, devoted to interests of traveling men, appeared the following notes regarding Paris men, and traveling men known to Paris merchants:

"J. W. Howard, of Paris, selling hardware for the Vancamp Hardware Company, reports business fine.

"Ed Margeleth, of the E. R. Webster Company, has been working around Bourbon county for the past week.

"Les Rue, of the Louis Stix Dry Goods Company, passed through Paris Saturday at a speed of well, we'd better not mention it or the Paris officials may be looking for him on his way back.

"Tub Wilson, of the Egalite-Wilson Company, called on Dan Jordan, at Paris, Friday. Tub was all dressed up, and when Dan asked him why the glad rags Tub said he was going to a funeral. When Dan solemnly asked who was dead, Tub mournfully replied: 'Business.'

THE EARLY LONG-DISTANCE

Inauguration of The Courier-Journal and Louisville Times radio service caused those reminiscences in clined to hark back to a period scarcely twenty years ago when the long distance telephone service was started in the smaller towns. At that time there were no local exchanges and the long distance box usually located in some drug store was the only telephone in the town.

Opening of the service in these towns was an extraordinary event and attracted large crowds, many of whom were dubious of actually being able to converse with somebody in Louisville or another place along the line and they would not believe it until they had experienced the unheard of novelty. From the primitive telephone to the radio was a great jump, but the inauguration of the latter scarce evoked more wonder than the demonstration of the other only a score of years back.

HARSH PUNISHMENT HELPS

Advocates of drastic punishment as a detriment to crime point to the decadence of bank robberies in Kentucky as a result of twenty-five-year prison sentences meted out in convictions in two recent cases. These were for the robbery of a bank at Auburn, Logan county, and the attempted burglary of a Columbia bank. Since these convictions bank robberies appear to have given Kentucky a wide berth.

Before that time the State suffered a long series of bank robberies with no apparent detection of the criminals that operated in every part of the State. That Kentucky juries at least may be depended upon to mete out heavy punishment in such cases seems not to have been lost upon the yeggmen that for a long time had easy sailing in looting banks and making off with rich hauls.

FORMER PARISIAN EULOGIZES "GOOD OLD STATE"

THE NEWS is in receipt of the following poem from the pen of Ed. M. Hite, native of Paris, now stationed at the Columbus, Ohio, Barracks as Fire Prevention Engineer, in the Fifth Corps Area of the U. S. Army. In this little poetic effusion Mr. Hite tells of the love that pervades his being when he reflects on the "good old State," and a little feeling of homesickness and longing for the old home town must have come over him as he reviewed the lines. Mr. Hite's poem follows:

DOWN IN OLD KENTUCKY (Composed and written by Edward M. Hite)

I have wandered near, I have traveled far, I have seen the countries of foreign climes, And I have watched the nations as they grew. I have had reverses, and I have often been lucky, But of all the places on this earth, give me old Kentucky.

From the mountains tops of the dear old State, With their peaks of trees and flowers To the bluegrass that nods and bends with the summer winds, Near the valleys and fields of tobacco and corn.

The women are pretty, the men are plucky, Go where you may, but give me old Kentucky.

The rivers sing their silent songs, as they wind their way to the sea. The birds sing sweetly from mountain, valley and tree,

Neath the skies with color of silver and gold. Say, if you live in the dear old State, you are lucky,

For its home, sweet home, down in old Kentucky.

You may talk of the different places, and many are grand I know, Be where they may, North, South, East or in the golden West. The artist may paint his picture of lands far and near, And the sculptor mould his work in marble and clay,

There you will find hospitality, rich, fertile lands, never mucky, When I die bury me under the bluegrass, down in old Kentucky.

N. B.—It has been noted with marked distinction, how Kentuckians love their home State, and the fraternal friendship and good feeling that exists among them when they meet each other beyond the borders of their native land. Thus the emblem of the grand old State stands out in bold relief, "United We Stand, Divided We Fall." Columbus Barracks, O., Aug. 11, 1922

SYMPTOMS OF RABIES IN DOGS.

About ever so often a mad dog scare prevails throughout America and this year there has been an epidemic which has resulted in many a dog being killed because people thought he had hydrophobia when the dog was harmless. We had reports from veterinarians of several States concerning this new disease and we believe, after careful investigation, that what has killed so many dogs is a very small and deadly worm which bores through the intestines of the animal until it reaches the spinal column, and when that happens death usually results. The symptoms of this disease are dragging of the hind quarters in some cases, intense nervousness in others. The dog will quiver as if having a chill and then run at full speed, yelping as if desperately frightened. These symptoms have caused many people to believe the dog was suffering from rabies, but we personally have talked with many men who have soothed and handled their dogs and we have not yet heard of an animal that made any attempt to injure anyone. It may interest those who have dogs affected that we have heard of one or two authentic cures being effected with carbon tetra chloride and the same remedy, it is said, will remove the deadly hook work which is destroying thousands of dogs in America.

"COLD IN THE HEAD"

Is an acute attack of Nasal Catarrh. Those subject to frequent "colds in the head" will find that the use of HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE will build up the system and render them less liable to colds. Repeated attacks of Acute Catarrh may lead to Chronic Catarrh. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is taken internally and acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system, thus reducing the inflammation and assisting Nature in restoring normal conditions. FEW WATERPOWER MILLS

There are a few of the old-fashioned water power mills in operation in Kentucky and they lend a touch of picturesque to the scenic environment. Most of these are of the undercurrent type and have been operated many years.

Probably the only water mill now operated by an overshot wheel is between Burnside and Monticello. The power is generated by the weight of the water falling into buckets attached to the wheel which is about thirty feet in diameter. The quaint old mill with its unique power generator attracts many visitors and camping parties to hold their outing in the vicinity.

WHERE ARE THE KNITTERS?

What has become of the knitters that were so prominent in the wartime activities? It seems that the great majority of those who feverishly knit sweaters, socks, wrist bands, and scarfs for the boys "over there," have laid aside their knitting needles for something else.

It was expected that the revival of knitting which almost had become a lost art, would take a permanent hold, but it has not done so. Interest in the accomplishment of the grandmothers seems to have subsided with the signing of the armistice and probably many who had become adepts with the knitting needles would have to learn it all over again. Many useful things for the household could be knitted at leisure and it seems a pity that such an accomplishment should soon fall into disuse.

CARVING 5,000 YEARS OLD SOLD FOR BIG PRICE

What is described as the "finest expression of Egyptian statuary in world," sold at Sotheby's auction rooms for 10,000 pounds.

It is the head of Amenemmes III, an Egyptian King who lived about B. C. 3,000. It is cut in obsidian, which is said to be one of the hardest stones on which an artist can work.

It measures four and seven-thenths inches from the top of the head to the chin, but Professor Percy E. Newberry, the Egyptologist, has pronounced it a "masterpiece that has not been surpassed by any sculptor of any country or age."

Jumping at conclusions lands you in a hole.

Why Pogue's August Sale Of Furs Is Well Worth A Trip To Cincinnati

BECAUSE—

All the resources of the Pogue store have gone into gathering of these furs. The highest genius of Europe and America have created them so that styles are distinctive and authentic.

The finest pelts, the pick of last season's trappings, make up these early models. Prices will be higher later, but quality and selection are at their best now.

PRICES ARE LOW, not only because of the generous discount, but because we planned and purchased for this sale when the fur market was at its lowest.

And bear in mind, because the season's peltry catch was unusually light, the inevitable law of supply and demand will force prices up

Furs purchased during August will appear on statements rendered November first

Furs purchased during this sale will be held in cold storage, free of cost, until December first
